BOB AVILA, AQHA World Champion Trainer & NRCHA Million Dollar Rider, exclusively recommends LMF Horse feeds.

LMF FEEDS INCORPORATED, a northwest-based company, had its beginning in Deer Park, Washington during the late 1970s when two individuals in the banking business, Marlin Statema and Lanny Clegg, bought an irrigated crop farm. By 1981 a small feed-milling operation was built. This was the humble beginning of LMF (Lan Mar Farms) Feeds. As the mill continued to grow, and recognizing the need for quality horse feeds, LMF Feeds joined forces with Kentucky Equine Research, an equine research facility in Versailles, Kentucky.

As the popularity of LMF Feeds continued to grow, greater demands were put on the mill until it became overwhelming. This was the beginning of LMF's partnership with Aslin-Finch Feed Co. in Spokane, WA and Farmers Warehouse in Keyes, CA. These two companies manufacture and distribute LMF feeds for Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, California, Nevada and Arizona.

In 1998 Dr. Stephen Duren of Performance Horse Nutrition, LLC took over the reins to continue providing LMF Feeds with advanced technology formulas that addressed the needs of horses in the West. LMF is now a major force in the western U.S. equine feed market.

Being ahead of the curve is an LMF tradition. LMF Feeds was a leader in offering feeds in A (alfalfa) and G (grass/oat hay) formulas that balanced with forages in the West to supply essential vitamins and minerals that are lacking in the Western diet. LMF Senior Feed was the first to include glucosamine, and LMF was the first company to come out with truly low nonstructural carbohydrate formulated feeds, LMF Low NSC Complete and LMF Low NSC Stage One.

No cheap fillers or by-products

Using only the best ingredients, with no cheap fillers or by-products, the LMF horse feed lineup offers superior products with outstanding benefits. There are many feeds that cost less per bag, but most LMF horse feeds reduce feed cost because of lower daily intake.

Quality, value and respected technical support combine to offer you the best feed on the market. Visit www.lmffeeds.com for information on our feeds, nutrition news and a dealer locator.
